VIM TRUCKS MAKING GOOD IN SOUTHWEST

The 100 or more motor delivery cars of this city represent an aggregate delivery routing every day of close to 6,000 miles, according to figures just compiled by Harold L. Arnold, the distributor of Vim motor cars of Los Angeles.

Sixty miles for a day's work at speeds of 15 miles an hour and rarely with anything like a full capacity load, except occasionally when leaving the stores, is considered a fair average.

Contrast the run just made by the three Vims in a reliability truck contest recently.

After winning perfect scores for all three, in the 135-mile drive to San Diego, and being awarded 100 per cent perfect by the Exposition officials in the brake test, clutch, speed and climbing ability, Mr. Arnold wanted the three Vims to demonstrate an ability over and above that obtained in the regular commercial test run.

The same day, therefore, that they finished the reliability run and went through the paces in the other test, these three Vims checked out at 4:15 p. m. for a fast return run to Los Angeles.

Four hours and 33 minutes later the model "T" Vim, a general delivery car driven by Geo. Knapp, checked in at Los Angeles, having made the run with full capacity load at the average rate of 29.7 miles per hour without a single mechanical trouble or a moment's delay on the route.

ARIZONA HAS FULL REGIMENT ON LINE

Adjutant General Charles W. Harris denied yesterday that the Arizona troops on the border consisted of less than a regiment. His denial was issued to refute dispatches reaching this city, to the effect that the Arizona organization was to be moved from its present station at Naco to Fort Huachuca. It was represented in these dispatches that there was less than a regiment of Arizona troops to be moved.

This is true as far as it goes. There are only two battalions to be transferred from Naco. The other battalion has been at the Fort for some time.

The Arizona regiment is a regiment in every sense of the word. It is not quite up to war footing, but it has more men than the average regular regiment on the line.

Summer is also the present season when the medical profession takes vacation, and offers no particular objection to kissing.

CAMPBELL-KIBBEY BANNER IS FLUNG TO THE BREEZES

Shaw's Smoke-House is a hotbed of republicans. This fact has been known before, but of late, there has been a striking testimonial to the truth of the allegation.

OLNEY MEETING IS A CALORIC AFFAIR

It was a caloric affair, the Olney meeting at the city hall plaza last night, the most pretentious meeting of the campaign. Though it had been advertised as a democratic meeting it was evident from the personnel of the speakers that it was not a Hunt democratic meeting. But there were Hunt men in the crowd, in the fringe of the crowd, some of them evident of the L. W. W. type, judging from the enthusiasm with which they greeted the sarcastic allusions to the governor's practice of spending his Saturday evenings with the criminals at Florence.

Captain J. W. Crenshaw presided over the meeting. In his introductory remarks, while he called no candidates by name, there was a note of criticism of affairs as they have gone in the state during the last few years.

The first speaker on the program was Eugene Brady O'Neill who did not keep the audience long in the dark as to his preference of the two candidates for the nomination for governor. Speaking of the flourer with which the governor and his party were collecting taxes of the corporations and the way in which they had taken the first step to put the railroads on the tax roll. He complimented the efforts of Judge Joseph H. Kibbey, then governor to make the mines pay their share of the taxes and the way in which they had succeeded in territorial democratic convention endorsed the work Governor Kibbey had done. All that, said Mr. O'Neill was long before the present radical element was dreamed of.

But now, said Mr. O'Neill, taxes are higher; not only the corporations are paying more but every man is paying more. The aggregate is an appalling sum, disseminated and spread by the administration in its countless official and commissions. It was during the speech of Mr. O'Neill that the Hunt outbreak in the fringe of the audience was first manifested.

Mr. O'Neill was succeeded by W. T. Webb, who said that he had come to Phoenix from his home in Graham county, not at the solicitation of Mr. Olney but as the representative of the old neighbors of Mr. Olney in Graham to do what he could to advance his candidacy. He briefly recited the life of Mr. Olney in Graham where he had come thirty-seven years ago as a boy in his teens. Since then his life had been an open book. He had been successful in business; had easily been the county's most successful and most useful citizen and had commanded the respect of all citizens. Mr. Webb deprecated the eleventh hour attacks upon the character of Mr. Olney, all of which as a neighbor who had known him all the years were without the slightest foundation.

Judge Baker speaks. The speaker of the evening was Judge A. C. Baker, who in the beginning said that he was interested in the election. He desired the election of Mrs. Eugene Brady O'Neill, who was seated on the platform, for the legislature and the defeat of George W. P. Hunt. Here there was another Hunt demonstration on the fringe. The speaker was now thoroughly awake and he denounced the governor as a violator of the laws of the state, solemnly to execute. He recited his disregard of the capital punishment law until the people had reiterated their preference for the law and had done something else that the people of no other state had ever been brought by humiliation to do—to take the power of saving murderers out of the hands of the governor.

The governor, Judge Baker said, had acted of humanity, but he had exhibited humanity only toward the criminal element, the convicted criminal, the cowardly wife murderer, the prostitute and the gambler. He had shown no interest in any other class of society. He had shown none toward the farmers; he had not gone to their homes to study how a governor might benefit them. He had taken no interest in the commercial life of the state. He had been the governor only of the worst class of citizens. In their behalf only had the laws of the state been executed and in their behalf laws had been disregarded and wantonly violated.

At the conclusion of Judge Baker's remarks, Chairman Crenshaw announced that the program had been brought to an end whereupon a motion from the fringe produced a round of cheers for Governor Hunt from the environment of the audience.

SAY TRAIN HELD UP

[Republican A. P. Leased Wire] EL PASO, Sept. 2.—Arriving at Juarez today were several passengers from Mexico City who said that the train was held up at a point below Juarez by a score of Villistas, who killed one Carranza guard and wounded another, as well as a small girl. After looting the express box, the robbers made off. The passengers added that a continuous shouting of "Viva Villa" was kept up by the bandits. The scene of the crime was between the stations of Corralitos and Bellano.

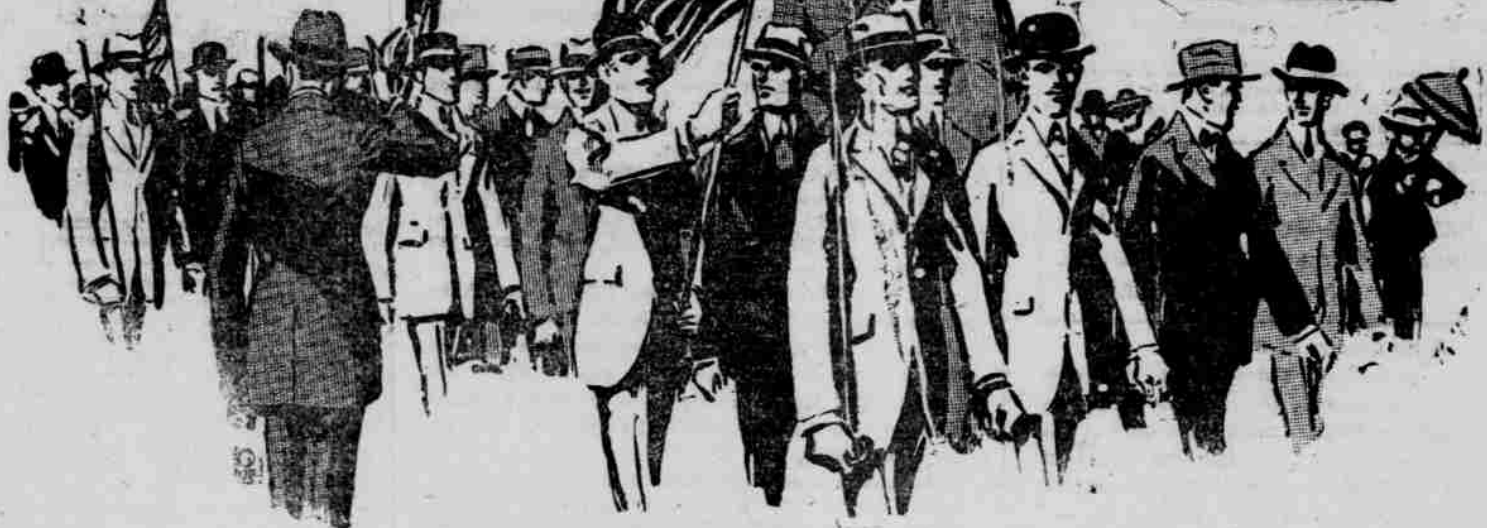

ROBBERS DYNAMITE VAULT

[Republican A. P. Leased Wire] BODIE, Cal., Sept. 2.—Four unidentified men early today dynamited the vault in the J. S. Cain company's store in Bodie, Cal., secured $6,000 in cash, a large quantity of bullion and valuable jewelry and made their escape. They left Bodie in an automobile and a posse took up the chase.

MESQUITE AS A STOCK FOOD

C. W. Renear, engineer, inventor and manager of the Renear Algobea Mining Company, of Honolulu, is now in Phoenix contemplating the erection of a mill that will convert Algobea or Mesquite beans into a wonderfully efficient fattening and strengthening fodder for stock. For twenty years Mr. Renear has been a resident of Honolulu and in that time has had ample time to study the bean and methods of grinding the same.

For many years the natives of Honolulu had been using the Algobea beans for stock fodder, but, on account of the hard shell which surrounded the beans the animals could not masticate them thoroughly and consequently many heads of stock unaccustomed to the fodder died of indigestion and those accustomed to it could only assimilate the pods and therefore got very little of the actual food value.

The bean kernels of the mesquite contain a surprisingly high percentage of food value, and are much more nutritious than the pods themselves, therefore it was desirable to find some method of grinding them so as to make the bean as available as food for stock.

Many attempts had been made in Honolulu to grind the beans, but, on account of the sticky, adhesive qualities of the sugar in the pods, it was found impossible to grind them with the machines and means then available. Tons upon tons of the beans were sent to France, England, Germany and Japan in an effort to find by experimentation some efficient manner of grinding the beans, but it seemed to be a useless search.

In 1908 Mr. Renear became interested in the possibilities of the mesquite beans in Honolulu, and he immediately began experimenting with machines of his own design and soon succeeded in perfecting a mill which successfully ground the beans into a meal of about the consistency of fine rolled barley. A company was formed and a mill was erected in Honolulu and equipped with several of the new grinding machines. When this was in good running order Mr. Renear sold his interest in the concern, with the exception of a respectable royalty, and came to the United States in order to erect mills in the southern and western part of the states where there beans may be found in abundance. Mr. Renear's plan is to perfect his machine so it can be made in all sizes and be run with a minimum of power so the small stockman may use and operate one of the mills on his property for his own use in fattening his cattle.

In regard to the nutritive and fattening values of these beans, a United States government report shows that in experiments conducted for 36 days, cattle fed three times daily with five pounds of a mixture of the Algobea meal and some native grass, gained as much as 120 pounds and at the end of that time they did not have what is commonly termed as a "haybelly," thus proving the assertion that the Algobea fodder is not alone a fattener, but also a big producer of muscle and tissue. It has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of government authorities that the new fodder is much more efficient than barley; that it costs less, can be grown without cultivation, and gives a fourteen fold larger yield per acre under good conditions than barley, which has until lately been the exclusive fattener. Furthermore, the government report states that the Algobea bean meal is the most evenly balanced food for fattening cattle in existence.

For commercial purposes the mesquite bean will doubtless be a success if the fodder is largely introduced into this country, because the beans can be gathered, cleaned and sacked for the small sum of $5 per ton, while the meal is worth about $45 per ton.

Mr. Renear says that there are some 60,000 acres of the mesquite trees growing wild in Honolulu, and that his machines have opened a new industry which ranks as high as that of sugar in value to the people of the islands.

It is likely Mr. Renear will make his headquarters in Phoenix, and experiment a little with the Arizona mesquite beans and investigate local conditions.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 2.—It was announced here today that the Canadian customs officials were holding the famous Maxwell "25" touring car, which established a new world's motor non-stop record last winter, for approximately $500 duty. Unless the owners of the car pay that amount over to the Dominion of Canada before a certain time, the car will be placed on public sale. If it does not bring the required amount at the public sale, the car will be destroyed according to the collector of customs at this place.

There is little chance, however, that the car will be thrown into Puget Sound, as the British Columbia Maxwell distributor is anxious to get the car for his personal use, and now that it is so well known, Maxwell dealers in all parts of the United States will try to get it from the Canadian government for the public sale.

THEY'RE MARRIED NOW. Last year he taught her to swim for the fourth consecutive time. This year he says if she can't swim by herself she'd better stay out of the water.

Much has been the object of much admiration because it washes its hands and face after each meal. So does a rat, but nobody ever holds up the rat as a paragon of sanitation.
